THREE DECISIONS BY THE SUPREME COURT

The Supreme Court yesterday hand ed down decisions in three cases. In McCandless vs. Honolulu Plantation et al., appealed by the defendant, the Supreme Court sustained the judgment of the Circuit Court, which was in favor of McCandless, in an ejectment snit to determine the title to a small keleana at Halawa.

In the matter of the estate of C Ahi, the Supreme Court decided that W. L. Whitney, who was the administrator of the estate, must pay $870.90 to M. Silveira & Co., the amount of a forty per cent. dividend of their claim against the estate, notwithstanding he had been discharged on a hearing of his petition for an allowance of final accounts and discharge, at which hear ing the creditor was not present, not having received notice of it, and his claim not having been considered.

In the case of Martello vs. Martello, the Supreme Court held with Judge Lindsay that the Circuit Court had no jurisdiction in divorce proceedings where the suit is brought in a different jurisdiction from that in which the parties last lived together as husband intendent of Public Works, Mr. Campbell, whereby the water from the reservoir may be used to develop power to pump artesian water for the mains for household use. In that way the city is assured of absolutely pure water, while the adoption of such a scheme as the control of the co scheme as Mr. Campbell suggests would add materially to the water supply. The water from the reservoirs, for instance, could be used altogether for irrigation after it had been used for power development. By a system of open irrigation ditches, such as are found throughout Salt Lake City and some throughout Salt Lake City and some other places, the gardens of the city except on the very highest levels could be irrigated. This water would be better for irrigation than the artesian water. It would be to expensive, of course, to put in another system of mains for the irrigation water, even if that were reserved.

Mr. Loomis states that he looks upon the offered opportunity as a grand one for the systematic displaying of the diversified agricultural possibilities of the Islands, and suggests the possibility of bringing here a number of representative American farmers to see what Hawaii has to offer homeseekers. Frederick H. Newell, Director of the Reclamation Service, is another who has taken up the proposition with fa-vor. The idea of celebrating the naval victories of 1812 with a celebration so far removed from the scene of those auctories, but in a place which time has entitled the celebration to be given, and at a place where American naval affairs are now of such paramount interest to the people, appeals to him and he has offered his help at to him and Washington.

James F. Morgan, president of the Chamber of Commerce, who had much to do with the inception of the idea, writes enthusiastically of the plan from the Coast. It is his opinion that the celebration could be arranged in such a way as to be of the very greatest benefit not only to Hawaii, but to the whole American interests of the Pacific. One of his suggestions is that at that time the schemed for Congress of Consuls could be held here, at which the consular representatives from every country bordering on the Pacific could meet, exchange views and together lay plans for the extension of American trade of the Pacific.

It is more than probable that Ha-waii could have visits from one or more members of the Cabinet at the time. The Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of Commerce and Labor could come consistently, and perhaps the Secretary of State could be present for the Congress of Consuls. It has also been suggested that con-gressional assistance might properly be secured for such an event as the sole

This plan has been talked over
